

Leia Eubanks named National Alumnae Reunion Coordinator for America's Junior Miss

Local event planner Leia Eubanks representing Milledgeville as she plans events for the America's Junior Miss program in Chicago, New York, California, and Atlanta.

Milledgeville, GA: March 25, 2010 – Yesterday was an exciting day for Leia Eubanks, a local event planner and nonprofit development consultant. After accepting an invitation from staff and officers of the Alumnae Council, Eubanks was named Alumnae Reunion Coordinator for America's Junior Miss, a national scholarship program for high school women.

The program's mission is nothing new to Eubanks. Since serving as Baldwin County's Junior Miss in 2005, she has volunteered for the program on a local level, providing support to young women who are striving to live by the Junior Miss "Be Your Best Self" platform.

Eubanks will coordinate four reunions per year for America's Junior Miss, allowing the organization to re-connect with the women who have benefited from its scholarship programs and supportive resources. "This organization is special to me; I've been involved on a local level for seven years now, and to be able to add event planning with AJM on a national level to my portfolio is a dream-come-true. I'm excited to be a part of this movement to reignite passion for the program, as it provides young women with unmatched opportunities for personal and professional development," said Eubanks.

Milledgeville – Baldwin's local Junior Miss program is being held April 10 & 11 at Georgia Military College's Goldstein Center for the Performing Arts. A record twenty-five high school Junior women will participate this year.
